ing upon President Taft to declare the treaty void.

Mr. Parsons's resolution declares that the fundamental principle of this government is that the rights of its citizens shall not be impaired at home or abroad because of religious hellef. The government of Russia has violated the treaty of 1832, the resolution states, by subjecting American Jews to the same restrictions that are placed on Russian Jews. The President'is asked to notify Russia of the termination of the treaty within one year.

Shall the United States abrogate the treaty of peace and comity with Russia adopted in 1832, when James Buchanan, later President of the United States, was American minister to Russia?

anan, later President of the United States, was American minister to Russia?

This is the question which will be discussed at the White House next Wednesday at a conference between President Taft, Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor; a representative of the State Department, and leaders of the three leading Jewish organizations in this country.

"It is because of Russia's refusal in certain cases to honor passports in the hands of American Jews that this demand upon the government is being made by the Jews of the United States. President Taft and Secretary Nagel agreed to the proposed conference as the result of resolutions adopted January 13 by the Counsel of the Unions of American Hebrew Congregations at New York, urging the President, the State Department and Congress to take prompt measures to terminate the present treaties between the United States and Russia.

Lady Warwick Declares "Babbling Brooke" Story Is Unjustified.

London, February 10.—Echoes of the "Harriet" after still continue to be heard to the further galety of nations.

The Countess of Warwick is one of the latest contributors to the London Times' "scandal mongering" column. She writes:

She writes: "Twenty-one years ago at a Don caster race party, occurred what was termed the Tranby Croft scandal. The American press, without exception, published my portrait beneath the heading, 'The Babbling Brooke.' My father-in-law, being then alive, accused me of having at this house party revealed the facts of the scandal to the public, and saving that the scandal to the public, and saying that but for my indiscretion this affair might have been kept secret.

"I have never been at Tranby Croft in my life. At the very time this party was held I, with all the members of my family, was in Scotland at the deathbed of my stepfather. Nevertheless, American newspapers persisted in this story whenever my name was mentioned, and when written to, replied that the facts had been sent to them by their correspondent in London, a lady moving in the best society.

"From time to time during the twenty-one years this story has been reprinted. In the course of time, if my obituary notice is mentioned in the American press, I have no doubt the latest edition of a story for which there was not even a foundation will figure for the last time."

was not even a foundation will figure for the last time."

Meanwhile, a poor woman, who by some London papers has been identified to their own satisfaction with the myster'ous "Harriet," has been removed from her father's house in the Midlands to a lunatic asylum.

Under the stress of overwork, it is said, she suffered a mental breakdown. Her father, who is a farmer, has given an interview, in which he said: "We have really known very little of the nature of the work my daugh-ter has been doing. It was very seldom that she spoke of it to us. Three or four years ago she was in London.

and it was while she was in London,
